

I. Security Of Your Personal Data

Of course the security of your personal data is a matter of trust. Let us to explain what we do for the security of your personal data.

Mail Order Data Transfer SSL-Secured Only

All mail-orders via online-store of Celtic Dance World are always secured by SSL-technology (128-bit). This is an international encoding standard for internet transfers. All personal data, e.g. your address and banking- or credit card details will be SSL-encoded which provides a safe protection against spies or hackers. By the help of a closed padlock symbol at the bottom of the status bar of your internet browser you will recognize that you are in a SSL-secured area. If your personal computer cannot work with SSL-technology - rarely but possible - you do not need to worry about that your personal data will be sent unencoded. You will usually receive an error message from our website instead. Please ask your internet provider what to do in this case

No Login = More Security!

No doubt that it is very comfortable to use a customer-login-function to have your complete data at your's disposal for not typing in all data again in every new mail-order. But please note, that your complete data will be safed on a strange internet-server somewhere in the world when establishing an user-account/a login! Indeed your data will also be secured, but in a case of trouble your complete data and credit card details will may be available for unauthorized! We are convinced that you don't need things like that!
This are the reasons why we do not provide a registration or login-function in our whole shop system! As a result you will always have to retype your complete personal data for every new mail-order, but what's the difference for more data security?!

II. Privacy Policy

We are please about your interest in our website, our company and our products. We always check the contents of external websites, but we cannot enforce prosecution even with thorough controls of their content. The Google +1 button is a way for you to share information publicly with the world. The Google +1 button helps you and others receive personalized content from Google and their partners. The fact that you +1'd something will be recorded by Google, along with information about the page you were viewing when you clicked on the +1 button. Your +1's may appear to others as an annotation with your profile name and photo in Google services (such as in search results or on your Google Profile) or elsewhere on websites and ads on the Internet.
Google will record information about your +1 activity in order to provide you and other users with a better experience on Google services.
In order to use the Google +1 button, you need to have a public Google Profile visible to the world, which at a minimum includes the name you chose for the profile. That name will be used across Google services and in some cases it may replace another name you've used when sharing content under your Google Account. Google may display your Google Profile identity to people who have your email address or other identifying information.
In addition to the above-described uses, the information you provide to us is used subject to Googles main Google Privacy Policy. Google may share aggregate statistics related to users' +1 activity with the public, their users, and partners, such as publishers, advertisers, or connected sites. You may view the list of items you have +1'd on the +1 tab on your Profile. You can remove individual items from that list.
You may opt out of seeing +1 recommendations on third-party websites (including on ads on third-party sites) from people you know.
Google will store data (such as your recent +1's) locally in your browser. You may be able to access and clear this information in your browser settings.
More detailed information about collecting and processing of data from Google, about your rights and possibilities of saving your privacy you will find in the data security info of Google, at: <http://www.google.com/intl/en/+/policy/+1button.html>
